Syracuse, N.Y. -- After a sellout premier, a film about Onondaga Lake will get a second public showing.

"Beneath the Surface: The Storied History of Onondaga Lake," will be screened Tuesday, March 7, at the Palace Theatre in Syracuse. It will start at 7 p.m.

The film was produced by the Onondaga Historical Association and Otto Media.

It "covers the amazing history of the lake and the remarkable impact it has had on our American way of life over the past six centuries," according to a news release. "From the birthplace of Western democracy with the great Haudenosaunee (Iroquois) Confederacy, to a tourist attraction and the center of economic, cultural, and recreational development, Onondaga Lake continues to play a vital role in our community."

The film was first shown in January to a sell-out crowd at the Palace.

Tickets for the March 7 screening are $20. Tickets for a 5 p.m. VIP reception, which includes an open-bar cocktail hour, dinner and VIP seats, are $100.

Tickets are available at the OHA website.
