MORE INFO: Kathleen Quigley and photographer James Scherzi have created a coffee table book that explores 1,000 Islands summer living, whether in a Gilded Age cottage, a rare surviving steam yacht house with converted crew quarters or a castle. The book explores an array of resort architecture that dates back to the late 1800s when George Pullman, the Chicago railroad magnate, put the region on the resort map. Quigley is a travel writer whose work on assignment in Africa, Asia, Australia and the Caribbean has appeared in The New York Times, Architectural Digest, Town & Country, The Wall Street Journal, and other publications. Scherzi's photographs have appeared in such publications as Architectural Digest, Better Homes and Gardens, Bon Appetit, Family Circle, Gourmet, Metropolitan Home, Rolling Stone and The New York Times Magazine. Copies will be available in the museum gift shop for $45.
