Black History Month show

Clarence "Junie" Dunham works on a teletype machine at Western Electric in 1967.

THE DETAILS

WHAT: An exhibit of photographs, documents and oral histories entitled "Black Syracuse — A Community History and Mapping Project."

WHO: African American Studies Department at Syracuse University, Onondaga Historical Association, Syracuse University Southside Initiative, Dunbar Center and city of Syracuse

WHEN: Through April 30. Hours — 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday; 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday

WHERE: Onondaga Historical Association Museum, 321 Montgomery St., Syracuse

ADMISSION: Free

MORE INFO: The exhibit is curated by Claire Enkosky and Deborah Spector. It features about 60 photographs and documents, which were collected at the Black History Preservation Project's recent Digitization Fair held at Beauchamp Branch Library. It will also feature selected audio/visual excerpts from oral histories the project has been compiling.

CONTACT: 428-1864; cnyhistory.org