

Scene around Syracuse

The Onondaga Historical Association re-opened Wednesday, July 13, with a ribbon cutting ceremony, celebration gala complete with live re-enactments of some of the museum's most recognizable faces (including the head-to-toe, plaster-white Syracuse China worker, who roamed the halls with his trademark racks of drying china). OHA Executive Director Gregg Tripoli, left, explains the renovations undertaken to boost the facility, which included a museum gift shop, below. OHA Board President Tom Burton cuts the ribbon with unbridled enthusiasm. The street-side display windows in the background were also part of the renovations; the windows were previously bricked over. For more photos, visit Facebook.com/theeaglecny.com.

PHOTOS AMI OLSON

