

Three inducted into Manufacturers Wall of Fame

Rick Moriarty | r Moriarty@syracuse.com By Rick Moriarty | r Moriarty@syracuse.com

on May 02, 2013 at 10:01 AM, updated May 02, 2013 at 10:18 AM

The Manufacturers Association of Central New York has announced the induction of three business leaders into its 2013 Manufacturers Wall of Fame.

The inductees are:

- Peter Maier, president since 2007 of Intelligent Sensor Solutions at Inficon Inc., of DeWitt, a maker of instruments for gas analysis, measurement and control. He previously served as Inficon's chief financial officer for eight years.
- Joseph Talerico, owner of C.H. Thompson Co., of Binghamton. He bought the metal-finishing company in 1981 and has expanded its workforce from eight to 75 people.
- The late Leon Chandler, former vice president of Cortland Line Co. Chandler, who died in 2004, worked for the company for 51 years.

Their induction into the Wall of Fame will be commemorated with a plaque at the association's headquarters and recognized at its annual dinner May 9 at the Nicholas J. Pirro Convention Center.

The Manufacturers Association began its Wall of Fame in 2001 to honor community leaders who have shown long-standing dedication and commitment to manufacturing in Upstate New York.

The keynote speaker at next week's event will be Dennis Connors, curator of history for the Onondaga Historical Association. Connors will present a history of the Manufacturers Association and manufacturing in Central and Upstate new York over the past 100 years.

Tickets or additional information about the event can be obtained by calling Debbie Sindone at (315) 474-4201, ext. 24, or emailing her at dsindone@macny.org.

Contact Rick Moriarty at rmoriarty@syracuse.com or (315) 470-3148. Follow him on Twitter @RickMoriartyCNY and on Facebook at rick.moriarty.92.

© syracuse.com. All rights reserved.