Syracuse and Onondaga County are going to order 20 new signs for the Creekwalk and they want you to help decide which logo design they should use.

The logos and sign designs were a part of a class project by students of Professor Bill Padgett at Syracuse University's College of Visual and Performing Arts, said Andrew Maxwell, director of the city-county planning agency. The Onondaga Historical Association helped with historical content for some of the signs.

The signs are being funded through a combination of county, city, state and private money. The total cost is expected to be around $42,000.
