Learn About the Haudenosaunee: Great Law of Peace Center Opens [14 images]

Alex Hamer  |  12/1/15

Coinciding with Native American Heritage Month, Skä Nóñih-Great Law of Peace Center celebrated its grand opening on the shores of Onondaga Lake in Liverpool, New York on November 20 and 21. Skä Nóñih, which means peace and wellness in Onondaga, is meant to educate people about the Haudenosaunee and the Great Law of Peace, the founding constitution between the Six Nations. There are interactive displays, art, and cultural items all on display at Skä Nóñih.

The opening was celebrated by the Native and non-Native community with food, dancing, artists, and an opening address with words from Oren Lyons, Onondaga Faith Keeper.
Lyons had this to say when asked about the meaning of Skä’ Noñh for future generations: “I think this is the beginning of a resurgence of American history, of Native American history, here in this country. The American public is just not taught of it, the history of Native people here. So this is a good beginning and this is where the Tree of Peace was planted a thousand years ago, and I think it’s going to grow. Hopefully other nations will join in and the true history will come.”

RELATED: Native American Heritage Month: Video Explains How the Haudenosaunee Helped America Form
Ranakhweineh Royce Thomas, Mohawk, Wolf Clan, dancing in time with the drum at the opening of the Great Law of Peace Center. (Photo by Alex Hamer)
Makina Potak, Onondaga, Beaver Clan, showing that women smoke dance now too. (Photo by Alex Hamer)
Women dancers performing a round dance at the opening of the Great Law of Peace Center. (Photo by Alex Hamer)
The Tree of Peace with Clan System animals on each panel is on display at the Great Law of Peace Center.
(Photo by Alex Hamer)
Renowned lacrosse stick maker Alfred Jacques, Onondaga, Turtle Clan, at the opening of the Great Law of Peace Center. (Photo by Alex Hamer)

An older pair of beautifully beaded moccasins on display at Ská Nóth. (Photo by Alex Hamer)
A display showing a beaver pelt and the axe heads that would have been traded for it as well as the Treaty of Canandaigua Belt at the Great Law of Peace Center. (Photo by Alex Hamer)

Mocasins braided together from corn husks on display at the Great Law of Peace Center. (Photo by Alex Hamer)
Haudenosaunee Passports on display at the Great Law of Peace Center. They are used for travel and a symbol of indigenous sovereignty. (Photo by Alex Hamer)
Stone Carver Tom Huff, Seneca-Cayuga, Deer Clan, allows visitor Martha Johns, Oneida, to try her hand at stone carving. (Photo by Alex Hamer)

Versatile artist Tracy Thomas, Mohawk, Wolf Clan, at the grand opening of the Great Law of Peace Center. (Photo by Alex Hamer)

READ MORE
Alex Hamer | Haudenosaunee (Iroquois) Confederacy | Haudenosaunee
Oren Lyons | Native American History | Great Law of Peace